“It’s a collaborative approach with all patients, discussing what’s going on and then determining a plan of care that is mutually agreed upon,” Schmucker said. “I try to explain healthcare options the best that I can to patients and come to a mutually agreed-upon course of action. I will also ask if there’s anything else I can do for my patients.”

Schmucker attended Walden University, an online learning program based in Minneapolis, where he obtained a master’s degree in nursing. Before receiving his degree, Schmucker worked as a registered nurse in a community medical center cardiac lab. Schmucker is board certified by the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners and a member of the Northern Colorado Nurse Practitioner Coalition.

Schmucker’s passion is caring for children. He is excited about the variety that his new role will bring and the opportunity to investigate and determine what is ailing his patients.

In his free time, Schmucker enjoys caring for his three horses, hiking and camping.
